S.P. SHOPMEN WALK OUT

Strike Order Brings Out the Mechanics and Big Labor Conflict Now On

SHOPMEN OUT AT ARIZONA POINTS

At 10 o'clock this morning, one of the biggest railroad strikes in the history of the west was called and 35,000 shopmen on the S. P. and Harriman lines walked out.

The general order was generally obeyed by the men. According to reports from the railroad officials, all trains have been running on schedule time and will continue to do so without interruption. Trouble has been reported at several points but no serious damage done.

The union officials declare the roads will be seriously crippled and traffic endangered unless provision is made for care of urgent repairs and shop service. Over 80 per cent of the mechanics walked out and strike breakers are looked for at the most important points, but the situation is not viewed with alarm by the union officials.

At Tucson nearly all the shopmen walked out at 10 a. m., as did also the shopmen at Benson and Yuma. Special police have been detailed at all the railroad yards, and the next move of the railroad is eagerly watched.

ONE OF THE PEOPLE

By W. P. MILLER.
Say! who's that big man out there in the street,
Who evidently knows each man that he meets?
He certainly must be one of the band.
As everyone passing, grasps him by the hand.
It's his favorite walking place, out there in the street,
He's one of the people, and he's there with both feet.
All get from him a cheery word and kind smile,
He's honest as day, and without any guile.
All Pickett's long and honorable life,
He's fought like a warrior in the midst of the strife,
To give to the poor man, a chance and a bite.
Vote for our Pickett, and you will vote right.
One Pickett, immortal, with warrior few.
Shown to the world what brave men will do.
Wherever they struck there sure was a shock,
Our Pickett comes from the same fighting stock.
Arizona Territory, through hard luck or late,
Was a long time securing the rights of a state.
But now that she has them, look well to your ticket,
For that she's first represented by Pickett.
A Boost From the Thicket
I sat in the twilight, the day's work was done,
I wondered if the cause of the people was won.
From my reverie was startled, by a voice shouting "Pickett,"
I looked for the voice, and saw only a cricket.
When nature gives voice to guide us aright,
And crickets, the stump take, to join in the fight,
We ought easily be able to take the first trick.
And make Pickett's opponents, really feel sick.
